A tiny town full of charm

The Istrian coast of Croatia is a popular tourist destination for its beautiful beaches and crystal clear waters. There is, however, more to discover away from the crowded beaches, past the golden valleys and through the dense forests. The mountains are full of stunning traditional towns and villages that attract plenty of tourists to discover them each year. One of these towns is, Hum, which happens to be the world's smallest town.

Hum is a small medieval town that sits on a hill high above the sea. A stone wall surrounds the town that is from the 12th century. There is also a bell and a high stone tower from the 14th century. The town has two streets that join in the centre. There are old, stone houses along the streets, a museum with an arts and crafts shop, a church and the mayor's place. The streets are not busy because only 17 people live in Hum. The town is so small that it takes only 10 minutes to see it all. There are a lot of monuments to see that are ancient and of great historical importance. At the end of the tour, you can stop in at the town's only restaurant, Humska Konoba, and have something delicious to eat and try a local drink that comes from a secret recipe that is as old as the town.

- 1 Most people visit the mountains in Croatia.
- 2 Thousands of tourists visit Hum each year.
- 3 The oldest part of the town is the wall.
- 4 Hum has got too many busy streets.
- 5 There are plenty of important things to see in the town.
